MOD Blade Runner 2049 is a 2017 American neo-noir science fiction film directed by Denis Villeneuve, written by Hampton Fancher and Michael Green, and produced by Scott Rudin, Daryl F. Schmidt, and Leonardo DiCaprio. The screenplay is based on the 1982 novel Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep? by Phillip K. Dick, who also wrote the original novel on which the film is based. The film stars Ryan Gosling, Harrison Ford, Robin Wright, Mackenzie Davis, Ana de Armas, Sylvia Hoeks, and Lennie James. Set in 2049, it follows a blade runner named K, who investigates a case involving androids created to replace humans. Blade Runner 2049 is Villeneuve's second collaboration with Fancher and with Harrison Ford, following his critically acclaimed 2013 film Prisoners. Blade Runner 2049 was released on October 6, 2017 by Warner Bros. and was nominated for two Academy Awards, including Best Picture. The film received widespread acclaim from critics and audiences, and was praised for its acting, cinematography, music, art direction, production design, and original score.
